

The three main parts of trees include the root, stem, and leaves; they are integral parts of the vascular system which interconnects all the living cells.